Globalization is a leading force for industry worldwide, especiallythe new technology sector. This presents both problems andopportunities in the emergence of a new type of consumer and theeffects of globalization on industry in terms of culture,economics, marketing, and social issues at every scale from localto global. The main aim of the book is to enhance the reader ' sknowledge – especially from a multidisciplinary perspectiverather than from an individual functional perspective – ofinternational consumer behaviour. It also explores the role ofglobalization in the evolving world of the new technology sectorand provides an overview of the development of internationalconsumer behavior from historical, geographical and socialperspectives, while focusing on new technology products andservices. Professionals, students and researchers working in the fields ofnew technologies and information and communication technologies(ICT) as well as specialists of marketing and management are thetarget audience for this book. At the same time, the bookwill be pitched at a level so as to also appeal to a more generalreadership interested in globalization.

A trusted resource for Consumer Behaviour theory and practice. Consumer Behaviour explores how the examination and application of consumer behaviour is central to the planning, development, and implementation of effective marketing strategies. In a clear and logical fashion, the authors explain consumer behaviour theory and practice, the use and importance of consumer research, and how social and cultural factors influence consumer decision making. The sixth edition of this Australian text provides expanded coverage of contemporary topics.
