The British Merchant Navy comprises the British merchant ships that transport cargo and people during times of peace and war. For much of its history, the merchant navy was the largest merchant fleet in the world, but with the decline of the British Empire in the mid-20th century it slipped down the rankings. In 1939, the merchant navy was the largest in the world with 33% of total tonnage.

More Stories from Bob Jackman; author of 'Merchant Navy: Heroes and Halfwits', 'Merchant Navy: What a Life!' and 'Merchant Navy: Retired'. This collection tells of Bob's time before and after his many years in the Merchant Navy, recalling memories of his childhood in tenements in Glasgow during the depression, and of his adapting to retirement and settling down to 'civvy-life' as a newsagent in the Scottish town of Kingussie.

“ Rafiq remembered the first time he ’ d passed the Gulf of Aden. It had also been one of the most traumatic passages he ’ d ever sailed, and he ’ d never had the courage to put himself through it again. The nights were the worst. Navigating through the endless patch of black water, there would be a growing tension within the crew to see a white dot slowly creeping up towards the ship, getting closer by the minute. With no visibility, you had no idea what was approaching towards you. The deafening silence could make the smallest of waves splashing against the ship seem terrifying. The smiles would vanish, the sleep would disappear and everyone would unite in silent prayer to get across the line. ” Waters of the Night depicts the drama and emotion as Somali pirates try and take over two vessels in international waters when they ’ re least expecting it. Little do they know the pirates are following the orders of the officers of Guliztan, a terror state wishing to inflict maximum damage to the Indian coastline on the eve of their 75th Independence Day. This fictional novel gives insight into the minds of the ship ’ s crew as they fight against piracy and terror for their lives, for their ship and, above all, for the country they love.

Joe Brannan is living the good life; as skipper and owner of a charter dive-boat operating out of Thailand ’ s sin city Pattaya he has everything. Everything that is, except the cash flow it takes to keep his beloved boat operating. Then, due to an unexpected twist of fate, he is approached by a beautiful movie starlet with a lucrative proposition that could change his fortunes forever. All he has to do is rescue a superstar hostage from the clutches of a gang of international terrorists. TROPIC HEAT. IMPOSSIBLE RESCUE. INSANE ODDS. Is Joe Brannan finally out of his depth?

The naval historian and retired merchant navy captain recounts the contributions of Britain ’ s civilian ships during WWII in this “ cracking read ” (The Bridgend & Porthcawl Gem). The first British casualties of the Second World War were not members of the Royal Navy, the army, or the Royal Air Force. They were British merchant seamen on the transatlantic passenger liner SS Athenia, torpedoed by a German U-30 submarine on September 3, 1939. For the duration of the war, Britain ’ s merchant fleet performed a vital role, carrying the essential supplies that kept the country running during the darkest days and made victory possible. Their achievements came at a terrible cost with 2,535 British oceangoing merchant ships being sunk and, of the 185,000 men and women serving in the British Merchant Navy at the time, 36,749 sacrificed their lives. Another 4,707 were wounded and 5,720 ended up as prisoners of war. Their casualty rate of twenty-five percent was second only to RAF Bomber Command ’ s. Thoroughly researched and full of fascinating true accounts, Bernard Edwards ’ s Churchill ’ s Thin Grey Line tells the inspiring story of those brave civilian volunteers who fought so gallantly to defend their ships, cargo, and country. “ A cracking read which brings home to the reader how much we in [England] owe to the Merchant Navy . . . Bernard Edwards has done them proud. ” —The Bridgend & Porthcawl Gem

'The Trident of Neptune is the Sceptre of the World.' Antoine-Marin Lemierre By the 19th century, Great Britain truly ruled the waves. But where did the journey to dominance began? This is the first part of that story. Starting in 1500, the narrative begins with emergence of the Tudor navy during the Elizabethan period when England defied the might of the Spanish Empire on the world stage. It continues through to the Act of Union in 1707 when Great Britain was created and the point when the naval and mercantile sea-services parted company. Providing an overview of the 18th century merchant navy and it analyses the conflicts during the Seven Years War and ends with an account of the slave trade until its abolition in 1807. Prize-winning maritime author Richard Woodman restores Great Britain's mercantile marine to its rightful place in the nation's history - alongside that of the Royal Navy, to whose glories it contributed - but not buried beneath it. Truly this is a surprising history. 'If Neptune s Trident sets the standard for what is to follow - we can at least rest assured that there is a series that truly does justice to our proud merchant maritime past.' Nautilus UK Telegraph 'Richard Woodman tells many a good tale in this first volume and it is fascinating to read. I highly recommend this first volume in the Neptune s Trident for anyone with an interest in the early modern period. If the rest of the series is as good as this one, they should all be on the bookshelves of those studying the history of Britain, from the sixteenth to the twentieth centuries.' Open History Captain Richard Martin Woodman LVO is an English novelist and naval historian who retired in 1997 from a 37 year nautical career, mainly working for Trinity House, to write full-time. His main work is 14 volumes about the career of Nathaniel Drinkwater, and shorter series about James Dunbar and William Kite, but he also written a range of factual books about 18th century and WW2 history. "ADVENTURE IS BACK" Joe Brannan owner and Captain of a dive boat working out of Thailand's sin city Pattaya is desperate to keep his business afloat, so when an old acquaintance comes to him with a tale of sunken riches he simply can't resist taking a look. But nobody warned him he would risk losing everything as he is caught up in a maelstrom of twists and turns, malevolent villains, close calls and Cambodian pirates. And he certainly didn't count on falling in love. "BRANNAN ’ S RUN- THE ULTIMATE BEACH READ."

Writing with years of experience of sea life, Bernard Edwards vividly recounts a varied selection of truly classic warships gun actions, emphasising the often sudden change from routine sailing to devastating and potentially lethal combat with an almost unseen enemy. Specific actions include one of the earliest naval gun battles between ironclads at the Yalu River in 1894, celebrated battle honour epics such as the Falkland Islands in 1914 and Cape Matapan in 1941, night encounters in the Pacific or the busy English Channel, confused and fickle battles such as Dogger Bank and Heligoland Bight in 1914, and lone duels to the death on the high seas such as Carmania and Cap Trafalgar in 1914 and Stephen Hopkins and Stier in 1942. Bernard Edwards skilfully sets the scene for each action, explaining the background to the naval war at the time as well as that of the individual ships involved before retelling the stirring and dramatic story of each actual clash. Throughout all accounts too there is the recognition that the warship against warship gun battle, while now part of naval history, was a unique experience that often epitomised the most splendid traditions of navies and courage in the face of the enemy.

The story of a young boy who left school at 14 to work in the shipyard of Harland Wolff, Belfast. He went to sea at 16 years as an officer cadet and eventually became a captain. He struggled to start his own shipping company, not for the love of the business but to be in shore employment, and to be with his family during the political problems in Northern Ireland. His return to the Merchant Navy and the formation in Northern Ireland of the Merchant Navy Association in the Province for the benefit of retired seafarers.
